Plane etiquette

Unsure of the correct behaviour when travelling on a plane? Below is a light-hearted look at ways to avoid common in-flight grievances.

Boarding and disembarking: When boarding a plane, carry your luggage directly in front or directly behind. When it's time to disembark, do so by row. Don't try to beat passengers in the rows ahead to the door.

Hand Luggage: Travellers today cram more into hand luggage to avoid checked baggage charges, reduce the risk of lost luggage and pave the way for a fast airport exit. Ensure your bag is within the required dimensions, only bring one and, wherever possible, stow it in the locker directly above you.

Armrests: Let's face it, the middle seat doesn't have a lot going for it. As you settle in to your window or aisle seat, spare a thought for the disadvantaged middle seat dweller and allow them to claim some much needed armrest space.

Chair reclining: On short flights, reclining should be kept to a minimum and avoided completely during meal times. On longer flights, the one-in, all-in rule should apply.

Footwear: You're in close proximity to your neighbours. If there is any history of odour issues, footwear should remain on.

The seat in front: You're in a confined space, so the occasional bump to the seat in front is inevitable, but regular bumps are rarely well received. So, avoid the temptation to pull on their headrest for extra leverage when standing up and put the tray table back up gently.

The bathroom: Reaching the bathroom without breaking some of the rules above can be challenging. So, if you're a regular bathroom visitor, request an aisle seat and empty the tanks before boarding to avoid the rush that inevitably occurs once the fasten seat belt sign is switched off.

Pack the perfect policy

Don't buy your travel insurance until you have answers to these vital questions:

24-hour emergency assistance: In the event of an emergency, do you want 24/7 access to an Australian team with a global network of specialist doctors, nurses and logistical staff?

Medical cover: If you get sick or injured overseas, do you want more than just medical expenses cover? Would you like help to find treatment and if necessary, be evacuated?

Natural disasters: Do you want a policy that covers additional accommodation and transport expenses if a disaster like a volcano, tsunami, earthquake or flood disrupts your holiday?

Luggage: Do you want to make sure your luggage is covered if it's lost, stolen, damaged or doesn't show up at all?

Cancellation cover: Do you only want to pay for the cancellation cover you need in case you are forced to change your plans?

Car hire: Do you want cover for the excess if you have an accident?

Speak to your travel consultant about your travel insurance options.

Taking off with the kids?

Air travel with children does not have to be a stressful experience. Here are Flight Centre's tips for smooth flying with children:

Preparation: Ask questions of other parents. Prepare lists to ensure you have thought of and planned for everything. While it cannot guarantee everything will go smoothly, it will improve your chances.

Travel off-peak: Plan your flight times and dates to travel off peak if you can. It's not easy maneuvering through an airport with a child and luggage in tow and it's even harder when the airport is crowded. If your flight isn't full, you may also be able to take advantage of any spare seats after the fasten seatbelt sign is switched off.

Hand luggage: Expect the unexpected – carry medicines and extra nappies in your hand luggage, along with spare clothes for you and your children, spills happen and travelling in wet clothing is unpleasant.

Check-in early: Allow plenty of time to make your way through customs and the airport to avoid stressful sprints to the departure gate.

Distractions: Pack plenty of games, games consoles, colouring books and other activities to help make the trip more interesting. If the game makes noise, be sure to pack headphones.

Routines: Try to choose flight times that match your children's sleep patterns. An overnight flight may mean that your child will sleep for most of the journey, pack pyjamas for them and put them on, it will help signal that it's time to sleep.

Stopover: On long flights or those with poor connection times, consider stopping over for a day or two en route to break the journey and give everyone some much needed rest.

Top 10 places to visit in 2013

With the whole world on offer it can be hard choosing the perfect place for your next holiday, so here are Flight Centre's tips on the hottest spots to visit in 2013.

New Zealand: Outstanding natural beauty, geothermal wonders, intriguing Maori culture and adventurous activities combine to make this one of the world's most desirable destinations.

Hong Kong: Enjoy tasty cuisine, ancient temples, colourful festivals, theme park thrills and a range of shopping from street markets to designer boutiques.

Cook Islands: A postcard-perfect paradise filled with unspoilt beaches and crystal clear blue waters set against a backdrop of majestic volcanoes.

Queensland Islands: A huge range of holiday options, from 4WD camping adventures to 5-star luxury resorts are right on our doorstep.

Burma: A mystical country only recently opened up to tourism and be rewarded with raw, untouched beauty and stunning sights, like the temple complex at Bagan.

Hawaii: Each of Hawaii's islands has its own charm, but tropical sunshine, stunning beaches and lush greenery abound.

Morocco: Relax in lavish hotels, browse the souks or head out to explore the Sahara Desert and Atlas Mountains.

Abu Dhabi: From world-class sporting events to the allure of Arabian nights, Abu Dhabi has much to offer travellers.

Cote D'Azur: Nowhere exudes chic elegance like the French Riviera.

Family-themed cruises: Dreamworks and Disney characters and child-centred activities mean plenty for all to enjoy.

Hong Kong

Ride a tram to the top of Victoria Peak for a great view of the harbour, see one of the world's largest seated Buddhas or party the night away in Wan Chai.

London

Step back in time at the Tower of London, see the changing of the guard at Buckingham Palace, shop at Harrod's or explore one of London's famous markets.

Rome

Explore the Vatican City and see the Sistine Chapel, pretend to be a gladiator at the Colosseum, climb the Spanish steps and sample the local pasta and pizza.

New York

Catch a Broadway show, shop 'til you drop Sex & the City-style, see the Statue of Liberty or browse art galleries, like The Met and The Guggenheim.

Los Angeles

Have fun on a visit to Disneyland or Universal Studios, stroll Hollywood's Walk of Fame or head to Santa Monica for a lazy day on the beach.
