

What to expect from the pet transportation company

A good company will collect your pet from your home, board, feed and keep him/her comfortable until you are in your new location. They will then deliver your pet to your home.

1 They should be able to transport all pets including dogs, cats, birds, rabbits, fish and other animals.

2 They should be able to obtain General Health Certificates, vaccinations, flea washes, medication, State Vet inspections and other requirements necessary prior to your pet's journey.

3 For air travel they should arrange flight bookings and ensure the timely delivery to the point of departure and collection at destination.

Pet Transportation

Your pet may become anxious when they see you packing up and will begin to fret.

This anxiety can lead to strange behaviours in pets and they will do things that are uncharacteristic, such as hiding where you can't find them, to disappearing altogether.

Questions to ask when choosing a pet transportation company

- Is the company a registered member of an accredited association?
- Does the company have boarding facilities?
- Can you visit the premises to make sure your pet will be comfortable while in their care?
- Are their vehicles air conditioned in the rear compartment with sound proofing on the floors and sides?
- Is there adequate access to fresh clean water?

Pet preparation

- 1 You are required to have a current vaccination certificate. If you don't, you should get one from your vet immediately. Your pet will not be transported without one.
- 2 The Pet Transportation Company should inform you of all necessary quarantine requirements when moving pets interstate.
- 3 Before the packers or removal company arrive to pack your household, make sure your pet is confined, either in an enclosed cage or on a leash.
- 4 The crate can be hired from your chosen pet transportation company or you can provide your own. Your pet must be able to stand, lie down and turn around in the crate with ease, but there may not be so much room that it may injure itself. This will ensure your pet is where you want him/her to be when you are ready to leave.
- 5 If you think your pet will be disturbed by the activity it is a good idea to board your pet with the transportation company you choose.
