There's no other name you need to know when it comes gas fitting. Just contact is today!

What kind of gas do you work with?

Here at Female Choice Plumbing, every one of our professional gas plumbers has the resources to work with both of the most common forms of gas used in Australia for heating and cooking. We ensure all our gas fitting experts have had the training and experience to know exactly what needs to be done for both LPG and Natural gas, and have the tools and skills to do it. A Female Choice Plumbing expert gas fitter can even convert an appliance from one to the other, so you can get the results you want and deserve.

The 2 most common sources of gas are:

Liquefied Petroleum Gas (or LPG)
\(http://www.femalechoiceplumbing.com.au/lpg-gas-fittings/\)

LPG, as it's regularly known, is the gas that most commonly comes in bottles and cylinders. Primarily consisting of butane and propane, LP Gas is made during the refining process of petroleum, which is a naturally occurring flammable liquid. LPG is very useful either for appliances which are used outdoors, like a BBQ (<http://www.femalechoiceplumbing.com.au/gas-bbq/>) and patio heaters, or when a property doesn't have a Natural gas connection at all. That said, LPG can be expensive, and the bottles need to be refilled regularly.

Natural Gas (<http://www.femalechoiceplumbing.com.au/natural-gas-fittings/>)

Decomposing organic matter lets off gas, which eventually creates a store of gas underground. This gas is extracted in large mining operations and refined into what we know as Natural gas. It's then transported to homes and businesses through a series of underground pipelines, and is the gas most commonly associated with your building's mains gas line. Natural gas is very cheap and economical to run, and never runs out, but is limited by the extent of the gas pipe work.

What do you do to Commission a new Gas Appliance? (<http://www.femalechoiceplumbing.com.au/commissioning-gas-appliances/>)

Any new gas appliance, after one of our Female Choice Plumbing fully qualified, licensed gasfitters has installed it, will then need to take it through a process called commissioning. Here, your attending expert gas plumber will go over every aspect of the unit – including things like the gas pressure, ventilation and flues, electricity and gas supplies and gas attachments – to make sure the gas appliance is functioning properly and safe for use. Every one of our gas fitting professionals here at Female Choice Plumbing has the skills and knowledge to not only install any gas appliance you've purchased, but also commission it to make sure you get only the very best user experience possible.

Do you have Gas Fitters all over Australia?

Why, yes, yes we do! Female Choice Plumbing really is your local gas fitting expert.
