...the character of the building is what appeals to the occupier...

“Although this particular project is not a heritage property itself, the development is surrounded by character buildings and has been designed to suit the streetscape,” Lloyd said.

“Whether it is an apartment or office space, the character of the building is what appeals to the occupier and we find this style of project to be in high demand.”

Johnson & James is surrounded by an eclectic mix of antique stores and cafés, and is on a major arterial road between Perth and Midland so it incorporates high exposure opportunities for commuter traffic.

With the project well and truly under way, completion is due by the end of 2009.

Match is so impressed with the workmanship of Gavin Construction that the latter has been appointed to build a new apartment development in Mount Lawley named ‘Mix’, and will no doubt team up with Match to bring other projects to fruition in the years ahead.
