

Tree Retention During Construction

During construction and site development, local government authorities may mandate the retention and protection of trees on site.

The Tree Doctor has extensive experience working with both residential and commercial clients to ensure that trees designated for retention are protected and maintained during the construction period.

Our company will provide advice and implement protective measures to avoid damage and undue stress to trees during construction, ensuring that government authorities are satisfied and the project moves forward.

The Tree Doctor has an enviable record within the industry with regards to tree protection during construction and we believe our knowledge and skill set in this area is second-to-none.
