Team solves problem

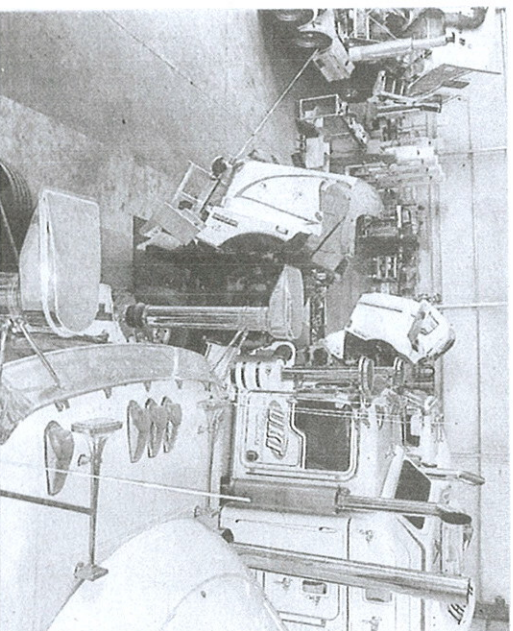

A QUICK look around the workshop at Express Truck Service in Queanbeyan immediately gives the impression that the team is committed to their work.

Well equipped, with plenty of room for five or six prime movers, spotlessly clean and well presented, the business, located on Endurance Ave, is professionalism all the way.

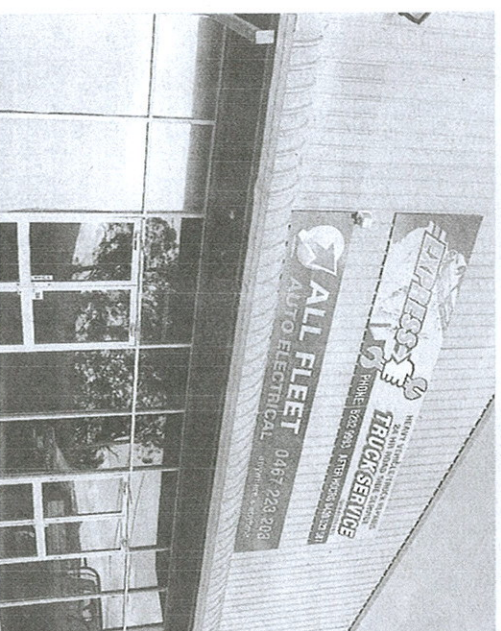

It's also a rarity to find so many young faces, who are led by a young fellow who's happy to roll up his sleeves and get down and dirty with the rest of his employees.

When 28-year-old Brett Stewart decided to go out on his own eight or so years ago, he took all that he'd learnt about work ethics and the need to offer fantastic customer service from his parents and his past employers and added a bit of flair of his own to create Express Truck Service.

Brett's knowledge of CAT engines is legendary in town, to the point where most who know him in the industry call him CAT-Brett. But it's not just CAT engines the team work on, Cummins and Detroit are names regularly in the workshop as they have the know-how to do it all. The business has flourished, with Brett's knowledge of diesel engines, the transport industry and his desire to succeed.

Customers call them when they are having troubles with their trucks in the ACT, NSW and even as far as SA.

They have a 24-hour express service and are always on call with two fully-equipped service vehicles, including their brand new Isuzu on site vehicle serving unit.

This unit has been set up primarily for onsite truck servicing at operator's locations.

They will make sure the repairs carried out on trucks are done quickly but still with the highest quality in mind. The team has reconditioned parts and a massive range of new and used truck parts and equipment available.

Sometimes their second hand, reconditioned parts are as good as new.
