Upgrading the taps and faucets in your house can greatly enhance its look as well as offer many water conservation opportunities. Taps and faucets are prone to wear and tear. After a period of continuous use, you might notice that your taps are starting to drip or are exceedingly difficult to open.

These are the effects of wear and erosion on the washers and spindles. What starts as a drop after you have closed the tap may soon develop into a plumbing nightmare if you fail to have it fixed in time.

Tap Install

Installing and repairing a tap can sometimes be time consuming and really requires accuracy. If a tap is not installed correctly, it can result to water drips which can increase your water consumption and bills. Same thing with repairs, if the tap is not fixed properly, it will also result to water leaks which is another plumbing problem

So whether it is a tap install or repair, you can count on Plumbers on Tap to work it out for you. We are experts in installing any type of taps from bath taps, basin taps and other taps including valves and stopcocks. We can even recommend you what tap to use effectively so you can conserve and use water efficiently.

If you have not yet purchased the tap, we have taps that are from the trusted brands and we use materials that will ensure quality results.

Should You Repair Or Replace?

If your taps and faucets have started developing rust around the edges, we recommend that you replace them as this may lead to a leaking instance. Newer faucets tend to be more water-efficient and can save you up to 30% of your current water usage, not to mention that newer faucets give your house a mesmerising look! However, if you are on budget, repairing faucets is cost-effective, especially when the problem seems minor.
