

Anti-Bump™

Bump Resistant Cylinders

Anti-Bump™

Approximately 90% of Australian homes use standard cylinder locks which are vulnerable to lock bumping.

The bumping method is non-destructive. When a bump key is used to break into a house there may be no signs of forced entry or damage to the lock, which can make home insurance difficult to claim.

The bumping method has become common knowledge through media reports and popularity on the internet.

High security locks are protected from the bumping method when they have bump resistant cylinders.

Standard residential cylinders can now be made bump resistant with new Anti-Bump™ technology.

Features

Kaba Anti-Bump locks and cylinders have bump resistant pins to guard against lock bumping. The patent pending technology inside Anti-Bump cylinders resists the transfer of force from a bump key to the pins, eliminating the bumping risk.

This cost effective method of Anti-Bump cylinders are available as a 6 pin C4 key-way, suitable for common Australian locks and allow for simple retrofitting. Anti-Bump cylinders are manufactured from brass with a satin chrome finish as standard.

Kaba Anti-Bump cylinders are available as individual, complete locks and/or special order cylinders on request.

Bumping

The knowledge of the bumping method is becoming widespread due to International media and the worldwide web, it has become a growing global security concern.

Lock bumping, also called key bumping or bump keying is a technique used to unlock standard pin tumbler cylinders with a bump key.

The bumping method could be misused by criminals to gain unlawful access to your property with a bump key.
